

HELPERS

Your Sunday with KidzQuest

A short guide to the tablet. About ten minutes to read.

Thank you for helping with KidzQuest. Giving up your Sunday morning for these children matters more than you probably realise. This guide walks through the tablet you'll use at the door. There's also a card in your room with the short version, so you won't need to carry any of this in your head.

The paper register told us that a child had come. The tablet does that too, and it also keeps a note of who took them home. So if a parent ever asks where their child is, we can answer straight away.

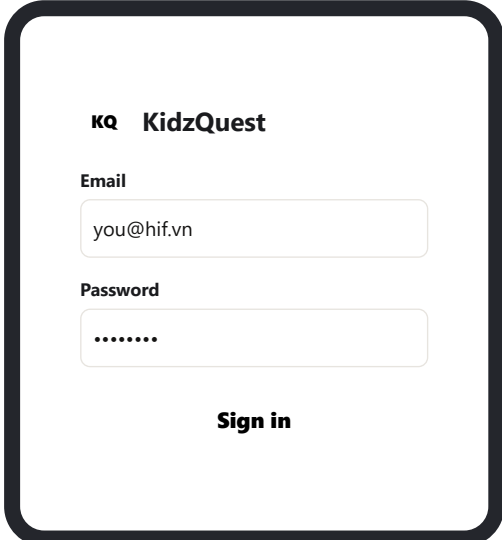

BEFORE SUNDAY

1 Sign in

Open the link Ate sends you, then type your email and password .

You'll be asked to choose your own password the first time.

Try this at home during the week if you can. Sunday mornings get busy, and it's much easier to sort out beforehand.

2 Tap your room

You'll see the rooms for Sunday. Tap yours.

Only the room you're helping in will open. If the others don't respond, that's how it's meant to work.

If nothing opens at all, you probably haven't been added to a room yet. Send Ate a message and she can fix it in a moment.

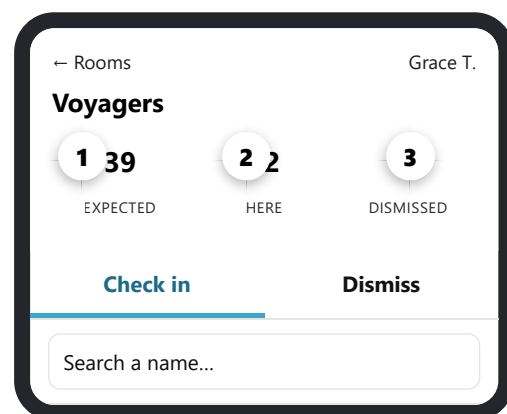

ON THE DAY

3 The three numbers

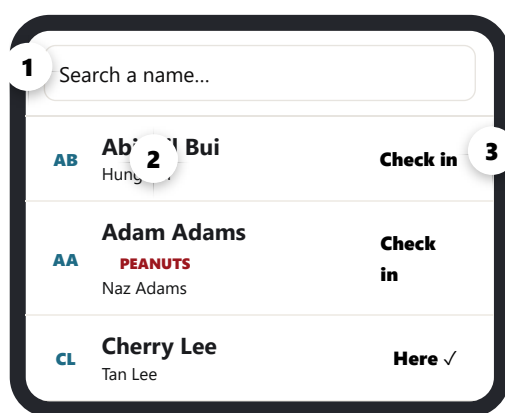

They sit at the top of the screen all morning.

- Expected is everyone on your register today
- Here is who has arrived and is still with you
- Dismissed is who has already gone home

Here is the one worth watching. By the time you pack up it should be back to zero, which tells you everyone has gone home with someone.

4 Checking a child in

Find the child, tap Check in, then tap the adult who brought them.

- If the list is long, type a few letters of their name
- A red badge means an allergy. Let the teacher know.
- Tap the green button

The row changes to Here ✓ so you can see at a glance who has arrived.

5 Who brought them?

Tap the adult standing in front of you.

If you can't see their name on the list, tap Someone else and let the teacher know.

1 is the adult who is here

Not sure who someone is? It's completely fine to ask their name. Everyone would rather you asked.

The same code appears on both

6 The two tags

Two tags print with the same code on both.

- 1 One goes on the child. It has their name, their group and any allergy.
- 2 The other goes to the adult, who brings it back at the end.

Matching the two codes is a quick way to find the right adult in a busy room.

The tablet is what tells you who is allowed to take a child home. If someone has a matching tag but their name isn't on the list, please still check with a teacher first.

7 A child who isn't on the list

Scroll to the bottom and tap Add a child who isn't on the list.

This happens fairly often. New families join us, and children move up between groups.

You'll need their name, the adult who brought them, a phone number, and any allergies. Please do ask about allergies rather than assuming there aren't any.

Whoever you write down here is the person who can collect this child today, so it's worth taking a second over the name.

Ate fills in the rest during the week, so there's no need to ask for birthdays, school years or email addresses.

GOING HOME

Only approved adults appear here

8 Handing a child over

- 1 Tap Dismiss at the top
- 2 Check the code on the adult's tag matches the screen
- 3 Tap the adult's name

Only the adults who can collect that child will appear. If the person in front of you isn't there, have a word with a teacher before anything else.

9 Someone new is collecting

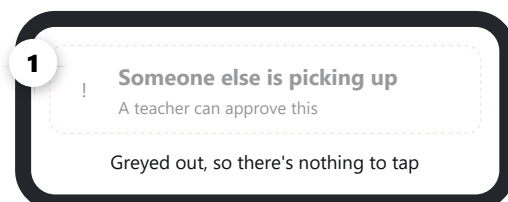

Go and grab one of the teachers. They can approve it.

Two people having a look is simply safer, and it makes a mix-up far less likely. That's the only reason this one isn't yours to do.

Most of the time it turns out to be a grandparent or a family friend and all is well. Something like this keeps it easy:

"Let me just grab one of our teachers. We always check when someone new is collecting. Won't be a moment."

If you ever feel unsure about anything, take your time. Nobody here will mind waiting.

How it looks on your screen

IF SOMETHING GOES WRONG

1 is the dot to watch

The wifi drops out

Carry on tapping. Nothing gets lost.

The little dot at the bottom of the screen tells you what's happening.

GREEN	Everything is saved
AMBER	A few taps are waiting. Carry on.
GREY	No connection, but still fine to tap

While the dot is amber, please don't close the tab or refresh the page. Anything still waiting would be lost.

The tablet stops working

There's a paper register in every room. Write the names on that and let the teacher know, and someone will put it into the tablet later.

You tapped the wrong child

Just tell the teacher and it can be put right. It happens to everyone now and then, and it's much easier to fix when we know about it.
